News Release

New City Website Goes Live

(February 28, 2013) – The City of Nampa has launched its new website. The web address remains the same, but the site has a fresh new look and more importantly, makes it easier for the public to find what they need.

Many new features are now available on the new website. Public documents like agendas and forms should be easier to find and access. The site is also easier to view on smartphones and tablets. There are also links to city Facebook pages, city twitter accounts and news letters.

City Council approved $40-thousand for the software, design and build, consulting services, staff-training, support, data-center hosting and deployment of the new site and underlying engine.

The City worked with Civic Plus, a company that designs websites primarily for municipalities and counties. A committee of City employees worked closely with the company to achieve the desired outcome.

The website will always be a work in progress as departments and divisions add information and forms the public may find helpful.
